

Proposals

For Keeping the Streets Lains and Passages of the City of Edinburgh Neat & Clean By a Voluntary Subscription of the Proprietors & Possessors of the Sundry Houses therein, For Paying proportionally amongst them the Charges for Carrying off all such Things as Used to be Thrown over the Windows, By Two Men Labourers Serving so Families, whose Rents amount to 800^l a year, By their Valuation in the City Rent Books, the Possessors paying the mens Wages, at the Rate of one half pouny of the pound of their Values Rent, pr month, and the Proprietors Paying at first for the Vessels & Utensils necessary for the Work, whereby the profit and advantage that will accrue to both possessor & proprietor, and even to the meanest servant, is very evident, and will more than compensate for occasion all the Charges, Beside our Sweet & Comfortable Dwelling together in Peace, when all such ^{as are} Dirty Streets and Quarrels is thereby forever Removed.